

Honor Oakley, Peter Hodgman, Club Secretary Peter Jandera and Meg Webb at Kingston Tennis Club's 100th anniversary celebrations. (PS Ray Quinn)

100 years of tennis in Kingston

Continued from back page

Ms Jay also took guests through the club's history, sharing stories and anecdotes from its first century.

Central to that history, she said, was the friendship and fellowship that had developed among generations of members.

That spirit is reflected in the club's motto, "It's More Than the Tennis", which proved particularly fitting as members and guests came together to celebrate the milestone.

Historical photographs, trophies, racquets and other memorabilia were displayed throughout the clubhouse, giving guests a glimpse into the people, competitions and events that have shaped Kingston Tennis Club since 1926.

A century of Kingston Tennis Club history was brought together through photographs, trophies, historic racquets and memorabilia for the anniversary celebration. (PS Ray Quinn)

Kingston Tennis Club's Honor Oakley and outgoing Club Patron Peter Hodgman cut the club's 100th anniversary cake during celebrations. (PS Ray Quinn)

Peter Crofts, who helped assemble the historical displays and memorabilia for Kingston Tennis Club's centenary celebrations. (PS Ray Quinn)